Light-hearted, well paced and humorous. It manages to combine benevolent, super-powered aliens exiled to Earth with themes of domestic terrorism, xenophobia, interracial and interfaith dating, and the ways in which loving families can be unintentionally cruel. And it all makes sense and is fun, which is the lovely thing about this series.

The project of London-based and Spanish-born Alberto García Roca, Alien Tango's vaudeville DIY bedroom pop is camp, catchy and chaotic. Roca's singular musical vision puts him in the same league as Daniel Johnston and The Lemon Twigs but his music has a more abstract slant than either of those artists, shot through with humour and surrealism that demands a lot from its audience but gives back much more.
