Reason and Faith are compatible with one another as is Science and Religion because there is but one truth. This is the position of the single largest religious group on earth in 2004, the Roman Catholics, and has been theirs for some time. It was clearly offered by Thomas Aquinas and has recently been re affirmed by Pope John Paul II (1998).

On faith and reason - Queensborough Community College

Faith is firm, confident belief in an idea, person, or thing without the assurance of proof. Reason is the thought process that leads to judgments and conclusions. Logic is the body of principles and procedures that guide the thought process and help us avoid errors in reasoning.

The Catholic View of Faith and Reason - Catholic Journal

Faith and reason are two orders of knowledge, linked and overlapping. Some truths are known only by revelation, others only by philosophical, scientific, or historical inquiry. Those known by revelation are often, however, fully understandable or their implications fully knowable only by rational inquiry.

The Renaissance of Faith and Reason

Faith and reason. Different conceptions of faith cohere with different views of its relation to reason or rationality. The classic medieval understanding of faith, set forth by Thomas Aquinas, saw it as the belief in revealed truths on the authority of God as their ultimate source and guarantor. Thus, though the ultimate object of faith is God, its immediate object is the body of propositions ...

Christianity - Faith and reason | Britannica

One component of faith is a certain kind of affective psychological state—namely, a state of feeling confident and trusting. Some philosophers hold that faith is to be identified simply with such a state: see, for example, Clegg (1979, 229) who suggests that this may have been Wittgenstein's understanding.

Any discussion of faith and reason has to ask the question, "What is faith?" The biblical answer, according to the author of Hebrews, is that faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen (11:1). The author goes on to say that by faith we understand that the world was formed by the Word of God.
